Comparative Review

Dear Mobile Platform Operating System Provider,

Network Computing will be conducting a comparative analysis of Mobile Platforms for our April 29, 2004 issue and we would like you to participate. The analysis will be based on a questionnaire that accompanies this letter.

At your earliest convenience, please review the attached questionnaire and send notification to Peter Rysavy (rysavy@rysavy.com) whether you will be participating, and whether you have any questions. If Peter does not hear from you by January 10, he will assume that you will not be participating.

Please return the questionnaire and any supporting documentation no later than end of day, January 31, 2004 to:

*Peter Rysavy
Network Computing
PO Box 680
(16 Prospect Ave.)
Hood River
OR 97031*

Please do not send press releases or spec sheets in lieu of this request.

If your company declines to participate, it may be noted in the article. We cannot guarantee coverage of late submissions.

We will be evaluating capabilities based on the answers to the questionnaire using key aspects such as inherent capabilities, third party support, capabilities of devices incorporating the platform and so forth.

By appearing in this publication, providers will definitely experience increased visibility and credibility. For nine consecutive years Network Computing has been ranked as the best-read networking publication by IntelliQuest CIMS. It reaches more than 220,000 networking professionals responsible for making purchasing decisions and has almost twice the reach to key IS decision makers as NetworkWorld.

If you have questions about our requirements please contact the writer, Peter Rysavy (rysavy@rysavy.com) or the editor, Lorna Garey (lgarey@nwc.com).

Thank you for your cooperation and participation, and I look forward to working with you.
